

Farmworker Health Network

Training and Technical Assistance Resources for Health Centers Serving Agricultural Workers

The Farmworker Health Network (FHN) is composed of six National Training and Technical Assistance Partners (NTTAPs) that focus on Migratory and Seasonal Agricultural Worker (MSAW) health: Farmworker Justice (FJ), MHP Salud, Health Outreach Partners (HOP), National Association of Community Health Centers (NACHC), Migrant Clinicians Network (MCN), and the National Center for Farmworker Health (NCFH). These NTTAPs provide coordinated training and technical assistance (T/TA) to health centers that serve MSAWs. Each NTTAP within the network brings expertise in areas such as clinical support, outreach services, governing boards, and program development.

This resource provides an overview of each NTTAP, highlighting their key services and contact information to support health centers in expanding access to care for MSAWs through T/TA.

Farmworker Justice (FJ)

About Farmworker Justice:

Farmworker Justice (FJ) is a national nonprofit organization that supports MSAWs and their families to improve their living and working conditions, occupational safety, and access to health care. Based in Washington, DC, FJ has over 40 years of experience working with MSAWs and the organizations that serve them. As an NTTAP, we provide health centers with resources to support MSAW access to health care. These resources include policy briefs, training-of-trainer curricula, and patient-facing materials in multiple languages.

Key Services:
